Cancer's cake link

WOMEN who scoff biscuits, cakes or buns two to three times a week are a third more likely to develop cancer of the womb, research claims.

A ten-year study into links between sugary diets and tumours looked at the eating habits of more than 60,000 women.

But the Karolinska Institute in Stockholm, Sweden, found little or no increase in risk from other high-sugar foods such as marmalade, jam, sweets or soft drinks.
